STRUCTURAL DESIGN CALCULATIONS

Stiffness. Stiffness depends upon material properties and geometry. The stiffness of a structural element of a given material is the product of the material's Young's modulus and the element's second moment of area. Stiffness is measured in force per unit length (newtons per millimetre or N/mm), and is equivalent to the 'force constant' in Hooke's Law. ...

Zigzag: Although amorphous red phosphorus (amorphous P) was discovered for more than 170 years, its exact molecular structure is unknown because of its amorphous nature. Results from single-molecule AFM, quantum mechanical calculations, and scanning tunneling microscopy suggest that amorphous P may adopt a zigzag ladder structure (2 in Scheme).

Book Description. While the risk of fire spread between buildings cannot be eliminated completely, the aim of calculating building separation distances is to ensure that ignition of a building adjacent to a fire is sufficiently delayed to allow the Fire Service to arrive on site and take preventative action. This new edition of BR 187, in support of national building regulations, describes ...

This guide stresses the systematic causal analysis of gender inequality. The analytical questions raised and the readings listed consider why and how gender inequality arises, varies across and within societies, persists over generations, produces conformity by individuals and institutions, resists change, and sometimes changes dramatically.
